This collection of works is about trees in my neighborhood that resonate with me. They are trees that I have observed and drawn and painted many times over years. All the works were painted directly in front of the subject using watercolour and gouache on tinted papers. This particular medium allows for a very direct response to the subject, and working en plein air allows me to, not only study the subject and the effects of light and weather, but also helps facilitate a deeper connectedness with the place – a meditation through the act of painting, which is inculcated in the painting, creating an embodied presence.
